

ABSTRACT

A mobile phone receives a program and identification information of a trusted application for the program, specifies data to be used in executing
5 the program, generates a type of object by selecting either an imperfect encapsulated object or a perfect encapsulated object to be generated on the basis of the identification information of a trusted application, and uses the data by using only the generated object when the program is executed.